God's Mission for the Church - Part 2

As a follower of Jesus, your primary purpose is to focus on the mission and to assist those around you to do the same. In part one of God's Mission for the Church we explored "mission Dei," and what God's mission means for you and for the church.

Fundamentally, when it comes to mission, it matters where you start. The mission is God's mission. Although we do a lot of talking about it, the mission is not the church's mission. And even though you are focused on the mission, it is not your mission. To start with anyone other than God is to misunderstand "missio Dei" and is to lead people away from a "loving and sending God" to "how can we get people to do what we want them to do" God.

Episode 396: Discernment as a Way of Discipleship
What if discernment is not hesitation, but discipleship? In this week's episode, Tim and Sara explore how truth shapes us before we ever speak a word, and why faithful leaders model reflection rather than reaction. Join the conversation and consider how living up to the name Christian forms our witness in a world full of opinions.
